Course Description

This class will explore the genre of children’s illustrated books. We will begin by looking at the emergence of the picture book within historical contexts and the narratological function of the genre—how does this marriage of text and image work? How do words and pictures work together to create a kind of “third story,” in the words of critic Perry Nodelman? Why did it emerge when it did in terms of the history of print? We will then turn more specifically to the overriding question of the course: how does ideology—the ideology of childhood, political ideologies, social ideologies, and so on—play out in illustrated texts?

In this class, then, you’ll:

- Become more familiar with the mechanics, aesthetics, and the ideological nature of texts with pictures and illustrations
- Become more familiar with some of the theoretical concepts regarding picture books and graphic narratives
- Produce an annotated bibliography based on some of the critical scholarship about illustrated texts/picture books/graphic narratives, published in scholarly journals and books.

Please note: This is an English department class rather than a college of Education class. As such, we will not be discussing pedagogical issues. Our focus, rather, will be on the critical study of these texts as works of art and as artifacts of material and ideological culture.

Student Learning Outcomes

For assessment purposes, I have designated two specific Student Learning Outcomes, which I will measure over the course of the term.

- Students will demonstrate knowledge of key concepts about picture books, illustrated texts, and graphic narratives, as measured by an ungraded pretest and post-test.
- Students will demonstrate effective writing by preparing an annotated bibliography that meets or exceeds expectations, as measured by a rubric used to assess the assignment.

<tr>
<td>In brief, in addition to the primary literary texts that you will read, this course will involve Reading Notes, online discussion, and one major writing assignment.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

1. Reading Notes. These will be notes that I have written, designed to introduce and contextualize each novel. You should always read the Reading Notes before you begin the assigned reading for the week.

2. Online Discussions. This is the most substantive part of your week-to-week grade for the course. For specific instructions on discussion threads and deadlines, see the weekly schedule at the end of this syllabus. All discussion posts for the week are due by 11:59 p.m. on the SATURDAY of the week in question. You may post as many times as you like, and you should definitely start posting even if you have not finished the entire reading assignment yet. In fact, sometimes it is very instructive to see people’s responses when they are only mid-way through an assignment. I very much prefer that scenario rather than having everyone wait until the very end of the week to post on the discussion board.

I have not set a specific quota for how many posts you need to provide for each week’s discussion. However, as a very general guideline, I will be looking for perhaps four substantive posts total per week to earn a “B/B+” for that week’s discussion. (By substantive I mean posts that are more than one or two sentences in length, posts that are detailed and specific, posts that work to enrich the conversation—not, in other words, short, overly-generalized posts that simply say “I really liked this story.”)

I urge you to write your comments in response to what others have posted, in addition to starting your own threads. If someone has already posted the point that you had wanted to make, add to that thread rather than starting an entirely new thread that says the same thing. To me, that latter action implies that you are not reading what other people have written. Remember, the whole idea is to get a discussion going! Occasionally, I will step in and participate in these discussions, and I will read everything you write, but I will not respond to each and every post because I am more interested in what you have to say about the pieces we read than in what I have to say. Please note that if you miss a discussion deadline, you will not be allowed to go back and post there. Thus you would not receive credit for that week’s discussion.

3. Writing. For the writing assignment due at the end of the summer term, you will be writing an annotated bibliography consisting of 7-8 scholarly articles or book chapters that you have carefully selected and read, in addition to an introduction to the bibliography/scholarship. I will place an abbreviated sample in Doc Sharing. Each bibliographic entry should be 150-200 words, not counting the actual citation, which should be in either the most current MLA or Chicago Manual of Style format. The introduction should be about 650-700 words in length, and it should introduce your reader to the entries that follow by providing an overview and laying out a unifying theme running throughout the entries in the bibliography (the sample in Doc Sharing does this clearly).
4. And, of course, plenty of reading.

Each week you should review the schedule on the syllabus carefully each week and make sure you are looking at the "Reading Notes" and "Discussion" areas under the "Week" tabs on the left side of the screen. Be thorough in examining relevant areas of the eCollege website, and let me know if you can't find something or if you find an error.

Required Texts

The following works are required for this course. In addition, you will have a number of readings to complete that you will download from eCollege (details provided in schedule of assignments). The ISBNs listed correspond with the editions ordered through the bookstore.

- Doreen Rappaport, Martin's Big Words (ISBN 9780786807147)

The following items will also be required reading, and they are available via eCollege:
- John Newbery, Little Pretty Pocket-Book (1744)
- Heinrich Hoffmann, Struwwelpeter (1845)
- Randolph Caldecott, Randolph Caldecott's Picture Book (1879)
- Munro Leaf, The Story of Ferdinand (1936)
- Articles on The Little House, The Story of Ferdinand, and Rose Blanche (see syllabus)

Grading Breakdown

Your final grade for the class will be calculated with the following weights:

- Online discussion (15% each week) 60%
- Annotated Bibliography (course paper) 40%

The department of Literature and Languages does not, as a rule, allow the grade of "Incomplete" (X) for its courses; incompletes are only awarded under extraordinary circumstances, pending Department Head and Dean approval. If personal issues or conflicts arise that lead to your missing a substantial amount of class, I encourage you to consider withdrawing from the class. As a rough guideline for what A-F grades mean, realize that an A is awarded for truly outstanding work (superior), a B denotes work that is significantly above the level necessary to meet basic requirements (above average), a C is for work that meets basic requirements in every way (acceptable), a D is given for work that meets only some of the requirements yet is still deserving of credit (under average), and an F results if work is not completed or if it fails to meet the requirements of the assignment/course.

To complete this course successfully, you will need a computer with internet access (high speed recommended, not dial up) and a word processor equipped with Microsoft Word. Our campus is optimized to work in a Microsoft Windows environment. This means our courses work best if you are using a Windows operating system (XP or newer) and a recent version of a browser like Internet Explorer or Google Chrome. Your course will also work with Macintosh OSx along with a recent version of Safari 2.0 or better. Along with Explorer, Chrome, and Safari, eCollege also supports the Firefox browser (3.0) on both Windows and Mac operating systems.</td>

| • Instructors in the Department of Literature and Languages do not tolerate plagiarism or other forms of academic dishonesty, and acts of plagiarism can lead to immediate failure of the assignment and/or course. Instructors uphold and support the highest academic standards, and students are expected to do likewise. Penalties for students guilty of academic dishonesty include disciplinary probation, suspension, and expulsion (Texas A&M University—Commerce Code of Student Conduct 5.b[1,2,3]). Examples of plagiarism include but are not limited to cutting and pasting information directly from online sources, copying material from books without providing source documentation, taking essays wholesale from online sources, having someone else write a paper for you, and turning in work that you have already submitted for another class.
• All students enrolled at the University must follow the tenets of common decency and acceptable behavior conducive to a positive learning environment. Standards of decency and acceptable behavior extend to the use of cell phones and instant messaging—please turn them off in the classroom unless you are awaiting a real emergency call for some reason. Additionally, please note that I enforce standards of inclusiveness in my classes. What that means is that I will not tolerate discrimination and disrespect in regard to race, color, creed, religion, national origin, sex, age, marital status, disability, public assistance status, veteran status, or sexual orientation.

- The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) is a federal anti-discrimination statute that provides comprehensive civil rights protection for persons with disabilities. Among other things, this legislation requires that all students with disabilities be guaranteed a learning environment that provides for reasonable accommodation of their disabilities. If you have a disability requiring an accommodation, please contact: Office of Student Disability Resources and Services, Texas A&M University-Commerce, Gee Library 132, Phone (903) 886-5150 or (903) 886-5835, Fax (903) 468-8148, StudentDisabilityServices@tamuc.edu.
