COURSE INFORMATION

Materials – Textbooks, Readings, Supplementary Readings:

Course Description:
This course provides an introduction to the theories and methods of women’s/gender studies. The course incorporates topics from the US as well as cross-cultural studies of gender in the contemporary world.

Student Learning Outcomes:
1. Students will learn to comprehend the underlying theories and methods pertaining to women’s studies/feminist studies
2. Students will learn to think and write analytically about feminist/gender issues
3. Students will compare and contrast issues faced by women in the U.S. and cross-culturally

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Instructional / Methods / Activities/ Assessments
This course consists of activities and assessments to assist you in achieving the learning outcomes for this course. It is vital that you come to class prepared to discuss the assigned readings. There will be frequent in-class writing assignments based on the scheduled readings. Students are expected to be prepared to discuss and write analyses of each reading assignment. Each of these assignments and/or quizzes will be worth 15 points. Because coming to class and being prepared is vital to student comprehension and the development of analytical skills students will be awarded 25 points for attendance and participation. Five points will be deducted for each absence. Students who exceed five absences will be dropped from the course. I also reserve the right to deduct an additional two points for non-participation in class discussions.
There will be two essay exams in this course. Each exam will be worth 50 points. The final exam is not comprehensive and only those students who provide adequate documentation will be permitted to make up exams at the same time that they take the final exam. Exams in the course will cover material from the reading assignments, lectures, class discussions and any films shown during the semester. All exams will require students to engage in critical analyses of the materials covered.

Each student will write two three-page critical reviews of two articles from the two readers. These must be selected from among the articles not covered on the course syllabus. Each paper will be worth 25 points. The papers must provide a brief summary of the content of the article and a critical analysis based on text readings and lectures. Note: The critical analysis should be the longest portion of the paper.

Grading

COURSE AND UNIVERSITY PROCEDURES/POLICIES
Cheating: Anyone caught cheating for any reason will receive an F for the assignment and depending on the seriousness of the incident an F in the course. All assignments in this class are meant to be done independently by each student. So be sure not to share your work with anyone.

Plagiarism is a serious form of cheating in which a student (or professor) fails to give proper credit to an author for their work and ideas. Always cite the sources of your information and remember that even if you summarize and paraphrase someone else’s ideas you must give them credit.
