Required Music Purchases
At our first lesson, we will discuss which music books I want you to purchase. I expect you to purchase the books immediately and have them within two weeks. I will provide photocopies of technical exercises, etudes, accompaniments, or any other individual pieces.

Required Practice
Students are expected to practice daily. Expect to practice a minimum of forty-five minutes to one hour every day. It is almost impossible to “cram” at the last minute and perform well on the jury. The jury is a performance, not a written test like you have in other classes. You are not only expected to play the elements of your jury well, but to do so in a performance setting in front of multiple jurists who will all grade you. Daily preparation is the only way to insure that your nerves do not get the best of you!

Student Learning Outcomes

1) Play all major or minor scales and arpeggios in a specified pattern and at a specified tempo.
2) Play technical exercises as assigned.
3) Learn a minimum of two pieces from different style periods.
4) Perform two pieces at the jury with one being performed from memory if possible.

Attendance
Students are expected to attend all lessons and studio classes scheduled by the instructor. The student will have one 30 minute lesson. Only one absence is allowed of each; after that, each absence will lower your final grade by 50 points. I reserve the right to drop a student from the course after four absences. Repeated tardiness (after two) will lower your final grade by 5 points for each. If you do not bring the necessary materials to your lesson, that lesson will be counted as tardy.

Lack of preparation is not an adequate excuse for rescheduling a lesson. Lessons will only be rescheduled in the case of a medical excuse or university sponsored trip if I am notified in advance of the absence. Understand that you must plan your week appropriately to complete your practice and come prepared to your lesson.
