INTRODUCTION

Welcome to this class. I look forward to having a productive, informative, and enjoyable semester. Three good reasons to take this course: 1) The content of this course is really important and interesting, as our lives are always affected by the actions of government whether the subject is curbside recycling or war; 2) A democratic nation like this one needs an informed citizenry; and 3) credit for this class is required for graduation in Texas. I promise to do my best to convince you that learning about American Government is both interesting and worthwhile.

The textbook for this course is O’Connor et al (2014) and is provided below. We will be reading from 12 chapters in this text. Supplemental readings will be provided during class time, on my website, and/or through the library. The version sold at the bookstore includes a passkey to an online interface, which includes some valuable exercises and study materials. Though I do not grade these items, they may be your time for understanding key concepts on exams.

Attendance Policy

You are adults taking on the financial responsibility of earning an education. With that said, attendance is not mandatory for any of my courses. It is up to you to decide whether or not attendance is beneficial to your educational goals. However, I do expect all students to be well behaved and considerate to their peers when they attend. Please turn off all cell phones before class starts.

Quiz Assessments: 10% of final grade

I will be administering several pop quizzes during this course. You can receive a “A” in the course without taking a single one, but taking the quizzes provides an assessment of your understanding of the material each week and a resource for exam preparation.
Exam I: 30% of final grade

Tuesday October 6, 2015: This exam will test your knowledge of major political science theories, institutional design, constitutions, and civil liberties and human rights.

Exam II: 30% of final grade

Thursday November 19, 2015: This exam will test your knowledge of political organizations, electoral processes, news media, and political participation.

Exam III: 30% of final grade

December 10, 2015: This exam will test your knowledge of civil rights and mass political mobilization.

Students with Disabilities:
The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) is a federal anti-discrimination statute that provides comprehensive civil rights protection for persons with disabilities. Among other things, this legislation requires that all students with disabilities be guaranteed a learning environment that provides for reasonable accommodation of their disabilities. If you have a disability requiring an accommodation, please contact:

Cheating Policy: Please do not work together during exams. If I catch you cheating, you will fail the course.

Whining Policy: There will be no make-ups for any assignment unless there is a legitimate health issue of emergency. It is very unlikely that I will change a grade unless there was a blatant error on my part. If you did poorly on an exam, I would be happy to discuss ways you can improve next time.
