Course Description

Marketing research is the formal process of gathering information needed by managers to make decisions with respect to marketing opportunities and problems. For example, a marketing manager might want to know the degree to which a new product will be acceptable to a group of consumers; the price consumers would be willing to pay for a new product; the degree to which customers are satisfied with a product or service; demographic information about an area where a new store might be located; the image of a company relative to its competitors; and so on. This course provides an in-depth look at the marketing research process and marketing research methods, such as survey, focus group, ANOVA, regression, and multivariate methods.

Course Objectives

Provide a fundamental understanding of the key concepts, principles, theories and models in marketing research.

Understand the strengths and weaknesses of a variety of marketing research tools (e.g., focus groups, surveys, multivariate methods) and how to apply statistical processes, and criteria for when a particular process is appropriate.

Understand using marketing research terminology and where to look for acceptable sources for supporting your position.

Demonstrate the ability to approach all marketing problems in a global setting.

Exams.

Three equally weighted exams will be given during the semester. These exams will cover textbook readings, lecture material, videos, and even possible guests' lectures. Basically you are responsible for all of the material presented in the class. There is no make-up exam. Each exam time limit is approximately 2 hours. You will not be able to print exams. Exams are not resettable. Access to the exams will be restricted after the due date.

Attendance & Class Participation:

Attendance and participation are vital to the success of your learning experience. The roll will be taken during the first 5-10 minutes of the class. If you are not in class when the role is taken you will be marked as absent. Students who leave early without advance notice to the instructor and sleeping during the class session will be marked as absent.

Course Communication:

It is the responsibility of the student to ensure that all notifications and materials sent to the instructor are received by the instructor.

Students are required to check their email at least once a day. The eCollege environment will be used for class related material and document posting so the students are expected and required to have access to that platform.
