Course Description

Course Catalog: Encounters between human populations who perceive the differences that separate them to be greater than the similarities that unite them have punctuated world history. Such encounters have frequently led to war, imperialism and colonization, and less frequently to cultural imitation and syncretism. The modern world is the product of these encounters as much as, if not more than, it is the product of the development of distinct regional cultures, such as Western Civilization. This course explores the nature of such encounters and the consequences they had for cultural and political developments. The course satisfies a Literature, Philosophy and Culture requirement for the core curriculum and may be repeated when topics change.

Instructor Course Description

When Mexico won its independence from Spain in 1821, the government was broke, and many people had high expectations for prosperity and local autonomy. Indigenous pueblos were wary of the new governments and jealous of their own independence. The inability to pay soldiers and military officers often led to local uprisings. The fight over Mexican nationhood took place not only on battlefield but in the press, and conditions led to politics at the extremes—some wanted a democratic republic, others a monarchy or dictatorship. The loss of more than half of Mexico's territory to the U.S. in 1848 only caused divisions to harden. There would be civil war, a French invasion, and more bloodshed before the nation experienced political and economic stability in the late 19th century. But troubles were not over. Authoritarian government, severe economic inequalities, and continued abuse of Mexico's indigenous populations led to the Mexican Revolution of 1910, in which 1 million people died from violence and disease. The Revolution violently brought in a new political order and general stability. But peace came at a price, as the nation was ruled in a one-party system that brought a measure of economic prosperity and national pride, but also dealt brutally with dissent and protest. Mexico is a product of a much different historical process than the U.S., and at independence had a population of 3.6 million indigenous peoples, 60 percent of the total. Its history was colored in violence because of the enormous diversity of people, limited political options, and strong sense local autonomy among regions. Convincing Mexicans that they were “Mexican” was difficult for the country’s founders. For much of its history, there was no cohesive sense of nation. War and violence changed that.

Student Learning Outcomes

By the end of the semester, students should competently meet the following learning outcome:

- 1.) Students will recognize historical patterns of violence and political instability in Mexico, and will also recognize internal demographics that determined aspects of inequality and civil war in the 19th and 20th centuries.
- 2.) (Global Course SLO): Students will be able to apply knowledge of the interconnectedness of global dynamics.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Instructional Methods

Participation and attendance: Regular attendance is expected, as well as regular questions and comments from students. Five points will be deducted for every three unexcused absences. Other lectures and film/video presentations will relate to class readings. Class time is meant for both lecture and discussion, so participation is important whether class involves interaction or film/video presentations. Class time is not nap time, and the instructor reserves the right to dismiss disengaged students. Use of cell phones during class is prohibited.

Plagiarism: Taking work directly from other sources and presenting it as your own is a serious academic offense, and will automatically result in a “0” grade for your paper, and possibly for the class. In addition, students will need to meet with the instructor for explanation and will be subject to disciplinary action by the University. Modern (or postmodern) technology has made detection of plagiarism easier than ever before, and faculty members in most cases have adopted a “zero tolerance” policy for such actions. All work produced for this class must come directly from History 265.01E students, and be specific to History 265.01E for the Spring 2019 semester.

Exams: Two Blue Book exams – a midterm and a final – will be assigned in this class. Students will answer two out of three questions in standard essay form and in longhand.

Discussions and Participation: Students will turn in reading summaries and participate in five discussions based on primary sources and academic works. Students are also expected to participate with questions and comments during lectures and discussion sessions for maximum grade points.

Semester Project: Students will produce a research paper of at least 8-10 pages, focusing on any aspect of modern Mexico (1821-2000), although some topics, such as the current drug war, are at this point non-historical and not permitted as subject matter. Paper topics will be pre-approved. Your sources should be based on historical monographs, academic articles, and primary sources. Guidelines for the paper will be discussed within the first month of class.

GRADING

Final grades in this course will be based on the following scale:

A = 90%-100%

B = 80%-89%

C = 70%-79%

D = 60%-69%

F = 59% or Below

Assessments

Attendance, Participation = 100 points

Discussions = 100 points (5 discussions, up to 20 points each time with paper)

Exams = 200 points total

Semester Project = 200 points total

Total = 600 points possible

Exams: Two Blue Book exams – a midterm and a final – will be assigned in this class. Students will answer two out of three questions in standard essay form and in longhand.

Discussions: Students will participate in six discussions based on the books, Neither Black Nor White, Bearing Arms for His Majesty, and a series of academic articles combined with textbook material. Students will prepare short papers (one page, single-space) for each discussion, and are expected to participate with questions and comments during lectures and discussion sessions for maximum grade points.

Semester Project

Students will produce a research paper of 10-12 pages, focusing on any aspect of race and ethnicity (which can include gender) in Latin America, and will include primary sources. Guidelines for the paper will be discussed within the first month of class.

TECHNOLOGY REQUIREMENTS

- To fully participate in online courses you will need to use a current Flash enabled internet browser. For PC and Mac users the suggested browser is Mozilla Firefox.
