COURSE INFORMATION

Required Text: Classical and Contemporary Sociological Theory (3rd edition), eds. Scott Appelrouth and Laura Desfor Edles

Course Description

This course focuses on the classical foundation of sociology, particularly the works of Marx, Weber, and Durkheim. Attention will be given to how these theories have given rise to the major theoretical perspectives in sociology as well as their general applicability to contemporary social phenomena.

Student Learning Outcomes

After completing this class, you should be able to...

1. Identify major sociological theorists and describe their main ideas and contributions to sociology
2. Describe, synthesize, evaluate, and explain classical theoretical arguments based on the reading of primary source materials
3. Apply a theoretical lens to the world around you

This syllabus/schedule are subject to change
COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Minimal Technical Skills Needed

You must be able to access a computer with Microsoft Word and use D2L.

GRADING

Final grades in this course will be based on the following scale:

A= 90-100%
B= 80-89%
C= 70-79%
D= 60-69%
F= 59% or below

Grades are out of 1,000 points

Assessments

- Connection Papers (40%)- 4 times throughout the semester you will write a paper examining a social phenomenon or piece of media through a particular theoretical lens. These papers should be roughly 5 pages in length and demonstrate your thorough understanding of one of the assigned readings. You will be graded primarily based on your engagement with and understanding of one of the readings. You MUST write connection papers on Marx, Weber, and Durkheim, though you can choose from the remaining theorists for your other paper. Each paper is worth 100 points.

- Discussion Posts (35%)- Each week you will post your response to the readings to the discussion board (weeks without readings will have discussion prompts to respond to). Your response should consist of an approximately 2 sentence summary of each reading and your reaction/response to each of the readings. This assignment is designed to challenge you to both communicate complex concepts in a simple and straightforward way in your writing and to distill what is most important from each reading. The goal is also to encourage you to reflect on the readings and share those reflections with the rest of the class in a way that promotes discussion. Each post is worth 25 points. You have until 5pm on the Saturday the week they are due to post your discussion posts.

- Discussion Comments (25%)- 10 times throughout the semester (with the exception of the first and last weeks), you will post at least 3 comments to other people’s discussion posts or comments, asking questions, supplying additional information, making connections to news stories, media, life experience, engaging in friendly debate, etc. Your comments must meaningfully engage with the conversation and the topic at hand to receive points. Each week’s comments are worth 25 points. However, I encourage you to engage in discussion beyond this requirement. Discussion comments must be posted before 5pm on the Monday following the original date of the discussion.
