Web-enhanced (part on-line and part in the classroom)

Our Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice has a multi-disciplinary foundation. It is social science oriented and academic in content, which emphasizes the knowledge and skills essential for a broad understanding of the criminal justice system. The program prepares students for entry-level positions in law enforcement, juvenile justice, courts, community based corrections, institutional corrections, and other related fields. With new breakthroughs in criminology and an ever-evolving domestic and international criminal justice landscape, our students build on the program’s foundation by choosing additional classes from a dynamic list of electives. Topics range from mass media and crime, crime profiling, and community-based corrections to courts and criminal procedures, law and legal research, global public policy, and an internship or senior seminar. A career as a law enforcement or criminal justice professional will be anything but boring.
