

ADMISSION PACKET

DOCTORAL PROGRAM IN COUNSELING/COUNSELOR EDUCATION

The Counseling Program's Doctoral Admissions Review Committee reviews all doctoral applications after they have been received by the Graduate School. Several criteria are factored into the overall score to determine admission into the program. These criteria include:

- GRE score (Verbal, Quantitative, and Writing sections)
- Entry-level course requirements (in comparison to CACREP master's program)
- Recommendations – A total of 4 references are required (at least one reference should come from a graduate faculty who has taught the applicant)
- Professional goals
- Work experience (document all professional work experience in counseling profession)
- Interview
- Written performance

Each of these criteria is considered by members of the Doctoral Admission Committee in their recommendation to admit or to deny admission.

ESSAY FORM SHEET

Instructions:

You are requested to write a one-page essay, which closely addresses the assigned topic. The typed essay will be read independently by the five members of the Doctoral Admissions Committee within the Department of Psychology, Counseling, and Special Education their ratings will be a part of the admission's decision process. It will be read for organization, content, and evidence of professional understanding. Return this in your completed application to the Graduate School.

Topic:

Counselors assist others in their process of change. Some think that it is what counselors do (technique) that assists in this change; others think that the relationship between the counselor and client is the most important catalyst for change; while still others would support that the motivation and readiness for change on the part of the client is most important to effect change.

Describe your personal philosophy of the principles, which guide therapeutic change. Identify aspects of this philosophy that derive from counseling theorists and those which are your own.
